SYNOPSIS

Three years into his hunt for the terrorists who murdered his wife and daughter, a bereaved former spy uncovers an imminent jihadist threat that leads him from the site of a wartime atrocity to global brinkmanship on the high seas.

Love, loss, and redemption are themes explored in this taut action thriller set against the exotic backdrop of the Philippines, a nation under siege from populist uprisings, political unrest, and a flailing government losing its grip to Islamic terrorists bent on imposing their own brand of Jihad.

Retired CIA agent, JACK CAYMAN, whose wife and daughter were killed by a terrorist bomb in London three years earlier, has tracked Al Qaeda mastermind, AMIR AL-AMATI, to the Philippines, but his leads have gone cold. Haunted by recurring nightmares and finding solace in a bottle, fate brings Cayman face-to-face with convicted killer, QUENTIN FOBBS, the one man who can lead him to al-Amati.

Joining forces with friend and ally, KATIE MCGRAW, Cultural Attaché to the US Mission, and CIA operative, KAI KWAN, Cayman follows a trail of murder, blackmail, and political intrigue as he closes in on al-Amati and London bomber, MOHAMED ATIF, all while unravelling an enigmatic mystery triggered by events that happened more than seventy years ago.

From London to Manila to Hong Kong to Washington, Cayman is thrust into a web of international terrorism that takes him from the site of a wartime atrocity to global brinkmanship on the high seas. The stakes are high: retribution for the murders of his wife and daughter, the repatriation of fallen World War Two Prisoners-of-War, and $14 Billion in Japanese war gold.

SOURCE MATERIAL

EIGHT THIRTY TWO is a tale of two converging storylines that come together in the climactic third act – one a work of pure fiction, the other, the stuff of legends, both rooted in factual historical record.

THE FICTION AND THE FACT

Amir al-Amati is Al Qaeda's de facto leader. He seized power after his predecessor, Ayman al-Zawahiri, was killed in a U.S. drone strike in 2022 along with Amir's father, Youssef al-Amati. Youssef had been Osama Bin Laden's chief fundraiser, and a man who operated in the shadows. When Bin Laden was stripped of his Saudi citizenship in 1994 (meant to appease Saudi Arabia's Western allies), it was Youssef who kept the channels open. After all, he had brought untold riches to the Kingdom. Youssef continued as fundraiser under al-

Zawahiri, but secretly despised him. Youssef, like many others, felt that al-Zawahiri's passive leadership had led to Al Qaeda's diminished role in furthering the aims of its founder. Youssef's son, Amir al-Amati, saw al-Zawahiri's death as divine intervention, and believed it was his duty to lead the terrorist organization, and he set about uniting Al Qaeda's splinter cells, consolidating his power, and initiating a global Jihad rivaling that of Bin Laden.

THE FACT AND THE LEGEND

Before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, the Empire of Japan had waged a ten-year war of attrition against its Asian neighbors. Known for the brutality of their territorial expansionism, the Imperial Japanese Army's own reign of terror swept across East Asia and the Pacific, amassing great wealth plundered from their military conquests. General Tomoyuki Yamashita took command of the Fourteenth Area Army in the Philippines in August 1944 – ten days before General Douglas MacArthur fulfilled his prophetic “I shall return” promise, and almost one year to the day when the United States dropped atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. With Japan's war effort waning, why General Yamashita went to the Philippines at this late hour is subject to speculation, and that's the question we explore in EIGHT THIRTY TWO.

tone and style

visual aesthetics

EIGHT THIRTY TWO will be filmed in the 1.85:1 aspect ratio while utilizing the Bleach-Bypass technique popularized by cinematographer Janusz Kamiński in Steven Spielberg's SAVING PRIVATE RYAN (1998) and MUNICH (2005). This post production process desaturates the image and lets the natural and artificial light sources bleed over into the darker parts of the image – the light sources start to glow and backlighting drowns the foreground subjects in shafts of soft lighting.

The visual aesthetics of EIGHT THIRTY TWO will evoke the documentary look and feel of MUNICH, the brutal realism captured by Chris Menges in Roland Joffe's THE KILLING FIELDS, and the surrealism of Oliver Wood's flashbacks in Paul Greengrass's THE BOURNE ULTIMATUM.

MISE-EN-SCENE

Scene composition, sets, props, actors, costumes, and lighting will augment the visual aesthetics to convey character details, themes, and plot. For example, at one point late in MUNICH, as Mossad agent Avner Kaufman is slowly losing his connection to humanity and his distant family, that feeling is captured while he waits for someone outside a shop. Kamiński films Avner standing at the display window, looking in at an ordinary kitchen. His reflection is superimposed on the window, placing him, metaphorically, in the kitchen. Immediately, you have a sense of his alienation from ordinary family life. His reflection is projected into the kitchen, yet he stands outside, separated from that world.

SOUNDTRACK

EIGHT THIRTY TWO is an intelligent, character-driven, action thriller, with the themes of love, loss, and redemption interwoven with high-octane suspense. The rich soundtrack will mirror the panoramic narrative tone, with atmospheric music ranging from pulse-pounding to heart-wrenching, reminiscent of John Williams's MUNICH, Alexandre Desplat's ZERO DARK THIRTY, Max Richter's ON THE NATURE OF DAYLIGHT from ARRIVAL, John Powell's THE BOURNE ULTIMATUM, and other films of the franchise, and Mike Oldfield's THE KILLING FIELDS. The commonality of these five films and their musical scores is that each of the five composers who scored them were honored with multiple awards from their peers.

FRANCHISING

EIGHT THIRTY TWO is a stand-alone motion picture that ends with a key plot element left unresolved.

The writers are currently collaborating on a continuation/sequel, tentatively titled EIGHT THIRTY TWO PART II. This story is set six months after the events depicted in the first film, with many of the original cast returning, including our two main characters, JACK CAYMAN, and KATIE MCGRAW, along with a new ensemble of supporting characters.

While the narrative for this new screenplay will resolve all plot elements presented in both films, many of the continuing characters could return for future installments of this franchise.
